As if worrying about the Democrats using cheat-by-mail to steal the 2020 election was not enough, the Strategic Culture Foundation has a new report out about how “contact tracing” will be used to suppress the vote in predominantly red districts this November.

Nancy Pelosi already successfully slipped cash for contact tracing efforts into the CARES Act in March, right under everyone’s noses. What no one realized at the time was that this is another taxpayer-funded effort to solely benefit the Democrat Party on election.

Blue states are already enthusiastically hiring “contract tracers” to get ready for this. In an earlier report, we mentioned that Washington state Governor Jay Inslee (D) is setting up concentration camps to house infected children and adults who will be kidnapped from their homes if they test positive for coronavirus – even if they are asymptomatic.

The idea behind contact tracing is that if you determine that one person is infected with a virus, you can then trace their movements and talk to (and test) everyone who came into contact with that person. Cell phone companies are already participating in this mass spying operation without the consent of Americans who are now having their movements tracked.

Where are all of these new government jobs for individual contract tracers going to come from? Well, you’re paying for it already. Some of the money was earmarked in the CARES Act for health care NGOs to participate in contact tracing, i.e., coming to your house, kidnapping you against your will and quarantining you in a WuFlu concentration camp. In other cases these NGOs are being funded by the usual suspects: George Soros, the Rockefeller Foundation, the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation and so on.

The very first health care NGO in California to receive a contact tracing grant was called Partners in Health. Chelsea Clinton sits on the board of PIH. She probably collects a Hunter Biden-like salary for her hard work there. PIH is almost entirely funded by the Clinton Foundation. If PIH sounds vaguely familiar, that’s because it was the NGO that the Clinton Foundation has allegedly been using in its efforts to loot Haiti for years.

Here’s how this scenario will play out as we get closer to Election Day in November. There will suddenly be a “second wave” of coronavirus in the fall. Never mind that there will probably not be any casualties from this second wave or that none of the people suddenly catching it are showing any symptoms at all. It will once again be a big public health crisis and blue states will lock everyone down again. This will, of course, necessitate the need for cheat-by-mail ballots. It will probably also coincide perfectly with House Democrats’ second impeachment vote against President Trump.

And here’s how the contact tracing will be used to suppress Republican turnout. The contact tracers will be canvassing neighborhoods to look for signs of “coronavirus.” Symptomatic households will be easy for them to identify – they’ll just look for the Trump yard signs or people wearing MAGA hats while they mow their lawns.

After the trial run of communism that America just went through, Democrat governors know they will only have a two-week window to pull off this stunt before people ignore their orders and start leaving their houses again.

So, rather than attempt to quarantine Republican voters one-at-a-time, which would be hugely inefficient, the Strategic Culture Foundation predicts that the DNC – sorry, the “contact tracers” – will declare coronavirus “hot spots” in heavily-Republican neighborhoods, districts or even counties. Under the color of law, the Democrat governors will then impose even more restrictive lockdowns and order people to stay in their homes.

But don’t worry, the contact tracers are professionals. They will harvest your ballots for you and make sure that they are deposited at the bottom of a lake somewhere.

And if you don’t cooperate with the contract tracers when they show up at your door suddenly in late October, claiming that you walked too close to a sick person at the grocery store, they will have the police and/or child protective services at your house to whisk you or your kids away for your own safety.

Sound far-fetched? Keep in mind we’re talking about a political party that still hasn’t accepted the results of the 2016 election. They’re still blaming Russian collusion. They’ve already proven that they are willing to say or do anything to keep Donald Trump from winning again.
